"If you love your workspace you'll love your work a little more" -cynthia rowley.

A lot of people understand that school can often be very stressful, and for those who find it hard to work with the unending chaos, we give you the cozy corner.

Hello I'm Madi Reiman and my role for this project was project manager

I'm Madalyn Rice and my job was team facilitator

Hi I'm Bryton Votava and my role was lead designer

And I'm Jamison Honey and I had the job of being the team's financial planner

For this project our challenge was to design a student-centered learning environment while adhering to a assigned budget of $1,750. The room we were given to design was the EDGE library. A small room with a lot of potential.

Our learning targets for our group were
   1. I can effectively work with my teammates to get to our outcome.
   2. I can properly use technology to design the interior of a room.
   3. I can use oral presentation skills to propose my ideas.
   4. I can effectively work with an assigned budget
   5. I can use creativity, collaboration, and communication.

Not only did we work with our group but we also had others from the community come in and help us learn the basics of designing. Camille Daniels gave us her time and taught us all about ways and strategies to stay in our budget as well as basic design tips. It was very helpful and definitely got our minds racing on ideas and ways to complete this project.

This is our Homestyler. For this piece of the project, we decided the feel of the room and what we wanted to accomplish with this space.

The purpose of our room was to be a relaxing environment to escape from the constant noise and stress here in EPod.The cozy corner will show this in our room. Our design will allow students to work in an environment without too many distractions.

Decompressing, relaxing, and peaceful came to our minds when creating this room and we hope to show that with our design.

Once we had an idea of what the purpose of the room was, we then chose our theme. We chose to do grey and white for a relaxing, not overwhelming feel and yellow as a pop of color that is fun and happy. These colors fit the purpose of the room being a relaxing room as well as being a place where others can get work done. Our group knew that we wanted to do a "cozy corner" for quiet individual work. With the cozy corner in mind everything else fell in place.

When it comes to furniture, we chose two futons, one coffee table as well as three side tables to fill one of the corners in our room. The next corner is our cozy corner. It is a smaller space with a shaggy rug and bean bags for comfortable seating as well as a bed canopy for individual, secluded time where you can peacefully get your work done. In the final corner, we have a table that can seat six people with clear white boards on the surrounding walls for collaboration and hard work.

We stuck with a grey and white theme which gives off a relaxing feel as well as a yellow pop of color to bring more happiness and creativity to the room. Which is shown on our vision board.

To bring it all together, we added two picture collages above the futons. We will be putting pictures of students working in EDGE to show how we, EDGE, are as a family as well as to make the room feel a little bit more homey. We also have fairy lights stringing from the ceiling as well as fake plants decorating the tables to bring the room together.

As shown on our financial plan on page 4 we have everything planned out for our design. For example, we have the price per item, the shipping, the sales tax, as well as where we are purchasing each item from. You also can't forget the total amount of money spent and left over.

With our budget in mind we made sure to pick furniture that was durable as well as affordable. We have a remaining budget of $349.08 for future upgrades as well as possible replacements if necessary.

We have put a lot of thought and effort in our design and we hope you enjoy it as much as we do. We are the cozy corner crew, thank you for your time and consideration. Do you have any questions?
